JOB Searching in the Good Old Summertime

The lazy, hazy days of summer will soon be here. It's a time when life is more laid back and children are out of school. Nice days in our area are limited. When summer is here most Central New Yorkers want to be outside enjoying the weather, not looking for work. Job searching, however, knows no season. If you're looking for work you probably can't afford to take the summer off. Let's look at some tips for job searching in the good old summertime:

- Job Searching & Vacation – As tempting as it is to take a vacation during those nice days of summer, it can be fatal to your job search. The serious job seeker does something every day towards their job search. If you're planning to go out of town, it's important to keep up with your job search and maintain your contact with employers. While on vacation will you be able to check your e-mail and voicemail for messages from potential employers? You may also want to continue to check newspapers and be sure to check on-line sites that you regularly visit so as not to miss out on an opportunity that you've been waiting for. If you're considering relocating to another area, you could combine your job search with a mini vacation. Schedule informational interviews with companies in the new city and then explore the area to learn about other employment possibilities.

- Summer's Slow Pace – Summer means vacation time for many working people. It may take longer for hiring managers or supervisors to respond to your resume or make hiring decisions. Always ask what the next step in the hiring process is and when you can expect to hear from the company.

- Keep Your Job Search Organized – With the kids home for the summer it's important to keep your resumes and job search log nice and neat and away from "crayon fingers"! If children will be answering the phone, make sure they know how to answer properly and take messages. You can't afford to have your teenager forget to write down the name and number of the employer who wants to schedule an interview with you.

- Summer Attire – Job searching attire never includes flip-flops and shorts. Even though it may be sweltering outside you need to appear professional, cool and collected. Whether you're going for an interview or picking up or dropping off an application, the rule of thumb is to dress one step above what you would wear on the job. Dress slacks and a button down shirt or blouse are always more appropriate than sandals and shorts.

- Seasonal Employment – Summer is also an excellent time to find seasonal employment. Many tourist-related vendors and restaurants put on extra people for the season. It may not be your ideal job but it could put some money in your pocket and fill a gap in your work history while allowing you to continue looking for your next job. Consider volunteering in the summer. Many humanitarian projects such as Habitat for Humanity or parks step up the pace for the summer and are eager for extra hands. Volunteering helps the job seeker develop new skills and make contacts.

Summer is short in Central New York but don't stop job searching to enjoy it! A job search is a full time job – rain, snow or sunshine. If you're looking for work this summer stop in to the OCWNY Career Center and let our staff help you job search in the good old summertime!

Stay Civil Even in The Midst of a Dispute

Build on the Ideas of Other People

Thomas Edison once said, “Make it a habit to keep on the lookout for novel and interesting ideas that others have used successfully. Your idea needs to be original only in its adaptation to the problem you are working on.” The lesson? Creative thinkers know how to adapt. Follow these four steps to train your own creative mind to adapt ideas into new solutions:

- Look at your present problem and compare it to other similar situations.
- Look into the past and find a parallel. What solutions did other people use that you could apply to your situation?
- Identify people you can mimic. Observe how they approach challenges and problems.
- Expand your scope by looking at ideas outside your field. Can you find any to incorporate?

“Whenever you are asked if you can do a job, tell ‘em, ‘Certainly I can!’ Then get busy and find out how to do it.”

—Theodore Roosevelt

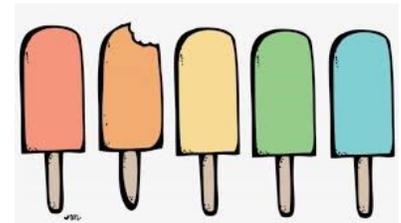

Civility in the workplace is crucial to everyone’s happiness and productivity. Although you may not be able to avoid occasional conflicts, you can keep disagreements from shattering relationships and creating an environment of hostility by remembering these rules when your blood starts to boil:

- Don’t yell. If you find yourself raising your voice—or if others are suggesting you calm down—stop talking. Take a few deep breaths and try to resume in a normal tone. If you can’t, then break off the discussion until you regroup.
- Watch your words. Name-calling is never appropriate. Nor is telling co-workers to shut up or to stop being stupid, stubborn, ridiculous, or ignorant.

• Focus on the problem.

Concentrate on solving the immediate problem, not assigning blame. Don’t bring up a co-worker’s previous mistakes or start rehashing issues that have long been settled. If the current problem is part of a pattern of behavior, arrange to talk privately once the situation is resolved.

- Don’t get physical. You should obviously never slap, shove, punch, or administer any other kind of physical abuse toward a co-worker. But you should also refrain from attacking chairs, doors, walls, and the like. Violence, no matter where it’s directed, is never an appropriate response.

Make Every Minute Count During the Workday

Time is your most valuable asset at work. If you struggle to get everything done on time and accurately, consider this advice for managing your day more efficiently:

- Question everything. Look at each task and ask, “Is this the best use of my time right now?” Delay or eliminate anything that’s unrelated to your most important responsibilities.
- Eliminate distractions. If you have an office with a door, close it to prevent interruptions. If you’re in a cubicle, consider posting a “Do not disturb” sign when you need to concentrate, or finding an empty conference room where you can work in peace.
- Cut the tech cord. Don’t be a slave to technology. You may have to turn off your email alerts and silence your phone in order to get your work done. Check emails and voicemail on a regular basis, but not every five minutes.

- Write tasks down. Instead of trying to juggle every task that comes up in your head, make a habit of writing things down as they’re presented to you. This helps you keep a clear mind so you can concentrate on the immediate task.

- Keep a schedule. Don’t just make a to-do list. Schedule each item on it, along with an estimate of how long each task will take. This helps you budget your time effectively throughout the day.
